Definitions and FAQs:

What is the purpose of filling out and exchanging Financial Disclosures?

For the court to end your marriage or domestic partnership, or grant a legal separation or nullity, you need to disclose ALL information about your income, things you own and things you owe. Both you and your spouse/partner must know what financial issues are on the table and what may be divided by the court. The court needs to know that you have shared this information with them EVEN IF you and your spouse have already divided everything or you think they don't have any right to the item(s). For categories that do not apply to you, write “None.” Do NOT leave anything blank on the forms. There can be severe consequences if you leave items off this form.

Separate Property: Items owned/acquired before your marriage, after the date of separation or received by gift or inheritance, even if received during the marriage. This includes items like cars, houses, debts, bank accounts, retirement accounts/pensions.

Community Property: Property owned/acquired from your marriage date to the date of separation, regardless of who is on title or whose name is on the account. This includes items like cars, houses, debts, bank accounts, retirement accounts/pensions. Some things like retirement plans can be both separate property and community property

Do I need to attach anything to the Financial Disclosure forms?

Yes, you must attach your paystubs, your most recent 2 years' tax returns, bank, retirement plan, credit card statements, etc.

Why Should I Use a Property Declaration instead of a Schedule of Assets and Debts?

If your spouse will not sign a written agreement, it is best to use the Property Declaration (FL-160) instead of the Schedule of Assets and Debts (FL-142). You will need to fill out two different Property Declaration forms: one for community property and one for separate property. On the form for community property, you must show how you think the property should be divided (the columns on the far right of the form). On the form for separate property, you must show which spouse the property belongs to.

Can I Access My Court Case Electronically?

Court users can now receive access to their file/orders electronically by three different methods:

Online Portal: You can come to the courthouse and show ID to gain access;

eFiling: If you check the box on eFiling, you will receive your orders via email; you will also receive portal access if you pay for a filing (so you do not need to come into the courthouse to show ID);

eService: You may consent to receive notice and orders by email. This can be done by submitting Judicial Council Form EFS-005-CV.
